Todd Matthews, NamUs

NamUs, funded by the U.S. Justice Department, is a powerful, free tool to assist law enforcement officers, medical examiners, coroners, allied criminal justice professionals, and the family members of missing persons in resolving these cold cases. Todd Matthews is the NamUs Communications Manager and a founding member of the Doe Network.

Silvia Pettem is a longtime historical researcher, newspaper columnist, and author of more than a dozen books. After decades of work for individuals, businesses, and governments, her life took a new turn in 1996, when she stumbled upon the gravestone of a Jane Doe—a murder victim from 1954. A few years later, Pettem applied her research skills to both old-fashioned detective work and the power of the internet by entering into a partnership with her local sheriff and with forensic experts of the Vidocq Society to successfully determine the young woman's identity. Pettem chronicled their work in Someone's Daughter: In Search of Justice for Jane Doe.

Brian Killacky is a retired Chicago PD detective who spent 25 Years as an Investigative/Instructional Consultant for OJJDP/DOJ in all 50 states and has assisted in the training of thousands in the investigation of Child Abuse, Cold Case Homicide and Violent Crimes. Brian will instruct on long term missing cases with focus on recovery, unidentified remains, cold case investigations and sexual exploitation of children.

Missouri State Highway Patrol Training Coordinators Matt Becker and Christopher Parr will be instructing on MULES Missing Persons, Amber and Silver Alerts.
